and more internal participation compared to the Barbeque Parties we have had just among LGC students the last two years. The Garden Party was formerly a dormitory occasion, but from this year it began changing into a college party.

Janice Choi, 21, the sophomore student president, who helped the dormitory leaders in organizing said that even though there were several technical and progressive difficulties, she was generally satisfied.

Also freshman Amy Lee, 20, mentioned she felt like she was at an international party and the group presentations extended her relationships with unfamiliar friends in college.

They said that they hoped this event would be an example for improvement of the 2008 Garden Party.

Linton Global College held its Annual Garden Party at the English Café on Wednesday evening, October 31st.

Following the opening address given by Dr. Graeme Webb, the new Dean of LGC, a speech by Anakin Rhee, LGC student president, and a celebratory speech by Joon-young Jo, the student president of the Liberal Arts College, the freshmen and sophomores divided themselves into groups for the performance contest.

The garden was decorated very well in a mildly smooth atmosphere with small candles and flowers on the front door steps.

Not only the LGC Family but also everybody in and out of Hannam was invited to come and enjoy the party.

It was meaningful that this event had expanded external invitations

I was born and grew up in Germany until I was 9 when I moved to the USA. I like to go to see movies or listen to music with my Korean wife.

My first impression of LGC and its students was that they look clever and are expected due to the high English level different from students in other department. I gave some advice to study seriously considering your career in a positive way, and to be flexible for your future job. Grab any opportunity of volunteering for surprising options opened for you.

External Agreement with K-Water

Linton Global College finalized an agreement with K-Water Academy for mutual cooperation on September 18, 2007 in which the parties pledged to share their expertise and experience.

Through this agreement and others like it, LGC students may have opportunities to gain valuable experience for their relevant career in their major field of study.

According to the agreement, LGC will provide qualified students to assist the international training programs of K-Water Academy. Likewise, K-Water Academy will provide students with opportunities to work on international training programs of the Academy. During the 2007 spring semester,

I interned with K-Water Academy. I felt like I had become an office worker.

This opportunity was practical and helpful for my career to improve relationship skills with seniors and foreigners, event organizing skills, and behavioral skills in unpredictable situations. Working with foreigners from various countries was one of the most advantageous aspects. I strongly recommend LGC students to seize this excellent opportunity and, if you put your effort, it might develop your abilities in many ways.

KOTESOL Student Volunteers

LGC students went to Sookmyung Women's University from October 26-28 to work as volunteers for the 15th Annual Korea TESOL International Conference. The juniors who are taking the class 'Exhibition & Convention Planning Principles' taught by Professor Louisa Kim volunteered as part of the class. Those juniors together with other freshman and sophomore volunteers totaled 19 students from LGC. Each of them were allocated their own positions to work on at the appointed time.

Wendy Park, 22, junior, volunteering for the second year in a row, said "My position was a greeter standing in front of the entrance and it was very cold. However, it was nice to meet many famous people closer and smile to them. If you want to meet various people then I recommend this position to you. It should be helpful to you."

Professor Louisa said, "By participating as a volunteer for the KOTESOL Conference, students can experience an international event. Even though they are not paid for volunteering, students can develop management and teamwork skills through the various activities and it can be a valuable lesson for college students." She also stressed that the viewpoints as an organizer and as an attendee in a convention or a conference is fairly different.

KOTESOL (Korea Teachers of English Speakers of Other Languages) International Conference offered 180 lectures about English education including 11 famous presenters for the attendees who are interested in and working in related fields. ## Hot Chitchat Beyonce Knowles visited South Korea on November 8 to perform concerts twice and stayed for 3 days by leaving the country on November 11. She held concerts in Seoul Olympic Park Gymnastics Stadium twice on 9th and 10th. Ten million fans enjoyed the concerts with the fascinating atmosphere and Beyonce's admirable performance. The great performance of professional dancing, singing, and instruments was properly harmonized together. Billions of fans were seized with enthusiasm over the concert of the world's top sexy singer.

The visit of a world pop star is a significant event and many people liked them coming to Korea. This kind of invitation is helpful in attracting the eyes of the world to Korea and helps maintain international relationships. Cultural exchange is an excellent way to gradually familiarize oneself with other cultures. I hope the worldwide exchange of celebrities increases.

"I love you, I miss you, I will be back soon" Paris Whitney Hilton visited Korea on Nov. 7 and left on Nov. 11. She stayed at the Grand Hyatt Hotel. There were two press interviews and she also presented at a charitable party. She tried to make an impressive image by holding signing events or taking pictures and the fans enjoyed the party. The people and media were concerned about her visiting behavior. She was crying while reading a letter from a Korean fan and bought a dog named Kim-chi. However, we need to consider if she is worthy enough to focus all of our media attention as a famous heiress and not a star. Of course, she is a singer and actress but there was no worthy performance. The problem of exaggeration and uncertain information became apparent through over-advertisement and speculation.

E-mail from Montreal, Canada

Dear LGC students and staff,

I hope everyone's doing good. I am doing quite well back in Canada, but I really miss all of my friends in Korea... and LGC of course!

Right now I am living in Montreal, Canada. Montreal is one of the largest cities in Canada. They speak both French and English here, so I am studying up on my French! I learned it in school, but I haven't used it for a long time, so I need to go over it again.

I am working as a professor at Champlain College here in Montreal. I like my job, but I miss the courses that I used to teach at LGC. My school has about 3,000 students in it, so I teach many more students than I did in Korea. I am having a lot of fun though, and I like the college.

Peekay has really loved being in Canada. There are lots of big parks just for dogs, so Peekay goes and wrestles or chases other dogs. He loves it, and I do too, because it means he gets really tired and then behaves well.

We both miss Korea though. He misses it because he used to be able to find Kalbi bones left over from family picnics whenever he walked along the river.

I miss my friends, the job and the great food! Actually, I went to "Little Korea" in Toronto a few weeks ago for Korean food. It was really good, but not quite the same as when I was there.

I hope everyone is doing well. I miss you, and if you ever come to Canada, look me up.
